Joseph Joyce Joins NERDC Policy Board

Joseph Joyce, 48, an expert on aquatic plant management and a longtime administrator and professor at UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences (IFAS), has been appointed to the NERDC Policy Board.

Currently, Joyce is UF's associate vice president for agriculture and natural resources, internal affairs. He holds a Ph.D. from UF's School of Forest Resources and Conservation, and earned B.S. and M.S. degrees in biology from the University of Alabama.

"There is no more important function within the University community," said Joyce, "than the management of information, and the connectivity of the university as a system with our diverse clientele. NERDC plays a central role in this effort and for that reason I look forward working on the Policy Board."
